WASHINGTON, D.C., April 2, 2019 — Today, Broward College in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, was recognized in an award ceremony in Washington, DC, as one of the top community colleges nationally in the 2019 Aspen Prize for Community College Excellence. During the ceremony at the Newseum, Broward was honored for serving as a national exemplar in guided pathways work and for having strong transfer partnerships with four-year institutions. Broward also has a combined graduation and transfer rate for students of color of 46 percent—more than 10 percentage points above the national average.

The $1 million Aspen Prize, awarded every two years since 2011, recognizes outstanding institutions selected from an original pool of more than 1,000 community colleges nationwide. With a singular focus on student success, the Aspen Prize assesses institutional performance in four areas: student learning, certificate and degree completion, high rates of employment and earnings for graduates, and equity in access and success for students of color and low-income students.

“Broward College has been a national leader in developing clear credential pathways with well-defined course sequences and a supportive wraparound system of advising,” said Joshua Wyner, executive director of the Aspen Institute’s College Excellence Program. “The school works hard to connect students to four-year universities and has done this all while almost entirely eliminating disparities for underrepresented students.”

The Prize winners, Rising Stars, and finalists were announced by Aspen Prize Jury co-chairs Ángel Cabrera, president of George Mason University, and Kathy Warden, chief executive officer and president of Northrop Grumman. Cabrera and Warden led a distinguished Prize Jury of higher education experts to select the top colleges, part of a rigorous review process that included the examination of extensive data on performance and improvements in learning, graduation, workforce, and equitable outcomes, along with multi-day site visits to each of the ten finalists.

The College Excellence Program thanks Broward College for participating in this year's Aspen Prize process, and for helping define excellence for community colleges nationwide. For more information on Broward College and the national press release, visit: <https://bit.ly/2FK6HkM>.
