WASHINGTON, D.C., April 2, 2019 — Today, CUNY Kingsborough Community College in Brooklyn, New York, was recognized in an award ceremony in Washington, DC, as one of the top community colleges nationally in the 2019 Aspen Prize for Community College Excellence. During the ceremony at the Newseum, Kingsborough was honored for its holistic approach to supporting students in and out of the classroom and for achieving a 49 percent student transfer rate, which is 17 percentage points above the national average.

The $1 million Aspen Prize, awarded every two years since 2011, recognizes outstanding institutions selected from an original pool of more than 1,000 community colleges nationwide. With a singular focus on student success, the Aspen Prize assesses institutional performance in four areas: student learning, certificate and degree completion, high rates of employment and earnings for graduates, and equity in access and success for students of color and low-income students.

“Kingsborough Community College is a national pioneer in developing innovative cohort-based models and supporting students with intensive academic and nonacademic supports,” said Joshua Wyner, executive director of the Aspen Institute’s College Excellence Program. “As a result, it has improved graduation rates in recent years, serving as a model for other community colleges in New York and beyond.”

The Prize winners, Rising Stars, and finalists were announced by Aspen Prize Jury co-chairs Ángel Cabrera, president of George Mason University, and Kathy Warden, chief executive officer and president of Northrop Grumman. Cabrera and Warden led a distinguished Prize Jury of higher education experts to select the top colleges, part of a rigorous review process that included the examination of extensive data on performance and improvements in learning, graduation, workforce, and equitable outcomes, along with multi-day site visits to each of the ten finalists.

The College Excellence Program thanks CUNY Kingsborough for participating in this year's Aspen Prize process, and for helping define excellence for community colleges nationwide.
