

Transfer Students at a Glance:

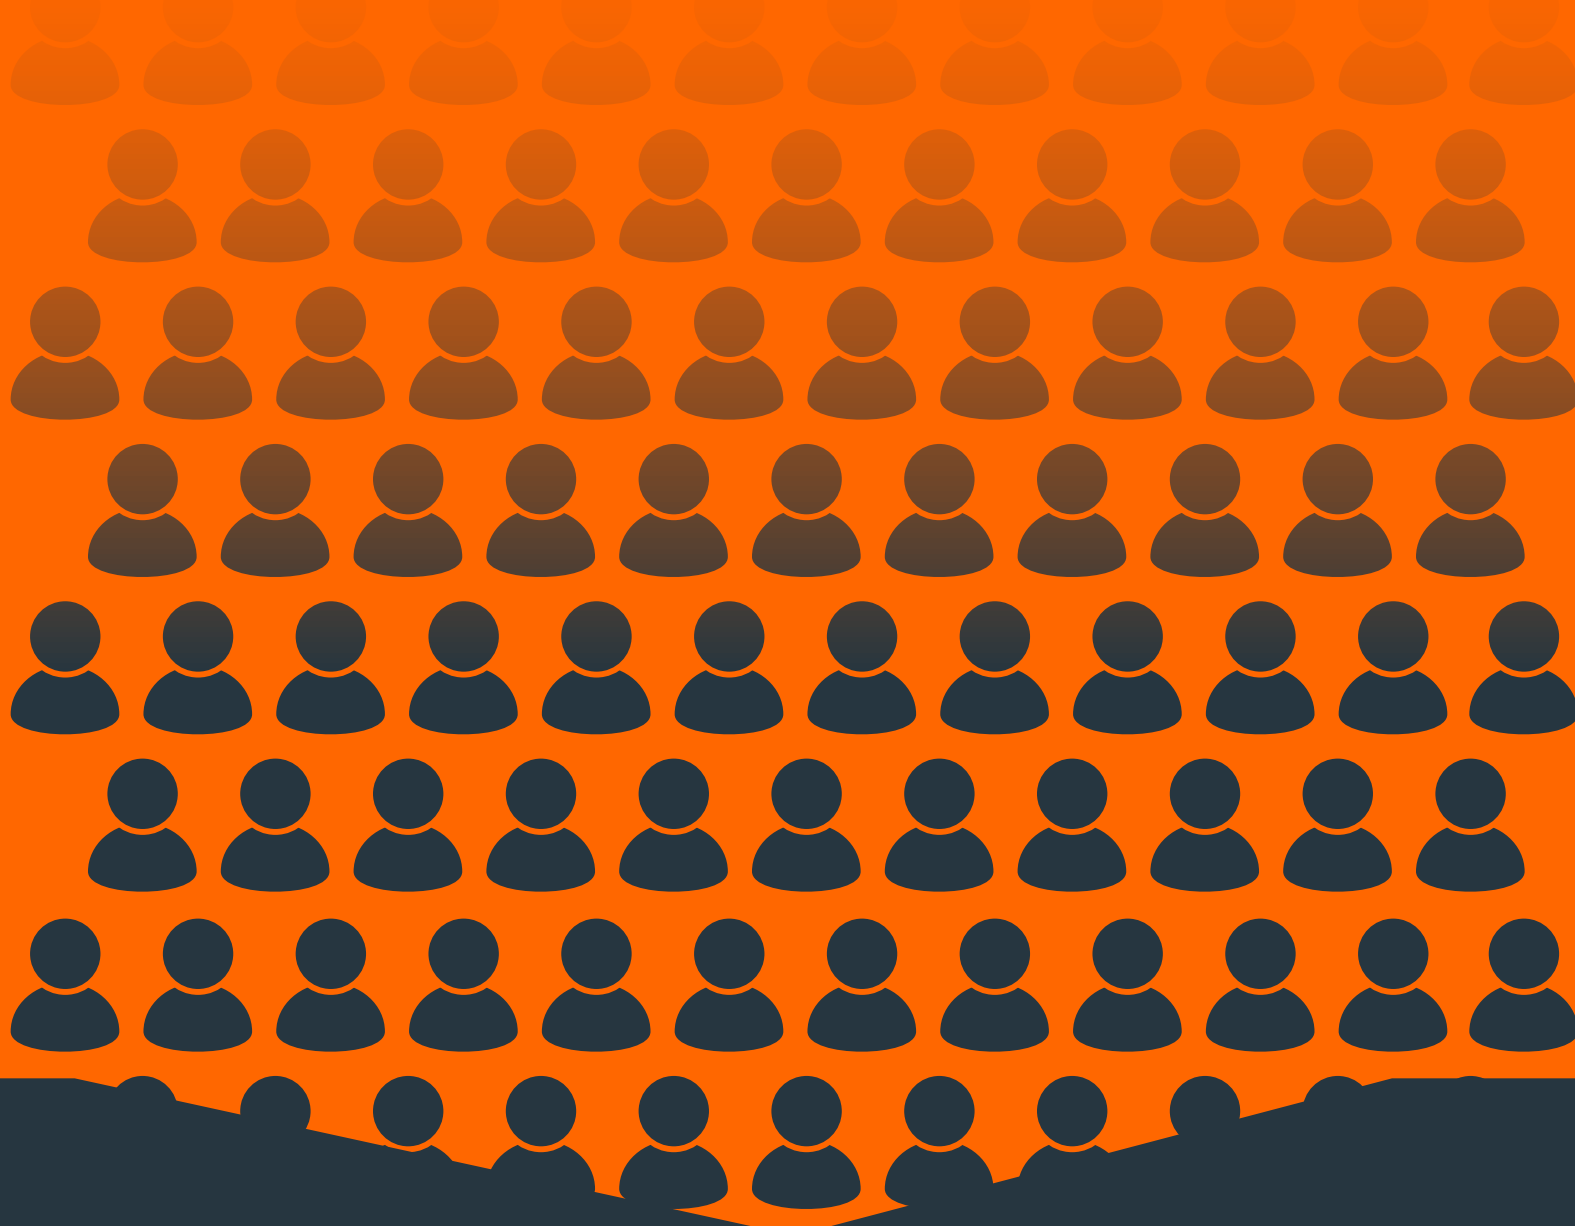

Where Are They Now?

Getting to the four-year destination is only the start of a successful transfer journey.

Around two-thirds of community college transfer students eventually earn a bachelor's degree.

451,326

students transferred from community colleges to four-year institutions in 2014.

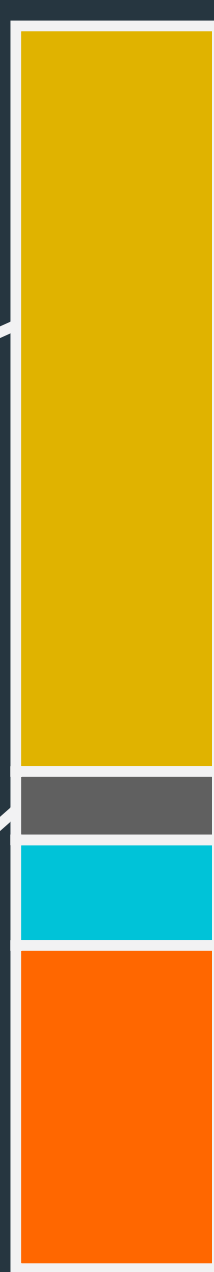

Six years later...

60%

had graduated with a bachelor's degree from their first transfer destination.

6%

had graduated with a bachelor's degree from a subsequent transfer destination.

9%

were still enrolled at a transfer destination.

26%

were no longer enrolled and had not earned a bachelor's degree.

Looking to learn more about transfer students and ways to support their success? Learn more at highered.aspeninstitute.org/community-college-transfer